The "Unsinkable" Titanic

On its maiden voyage in 1912, the british ocean liner the titanic sank after ramming an iceberg in the North atlantic ocean. The nearest ship, the california, did not get the SOS message because the radio operater had gone to bed and turned off his radio. The titanic's captain, Edward j. Smith, new that there were only enough lifeboats for half the 2100 people on board, in the panic, even those were not filled. Seventeen year old Jack Thayer from philadelphia was not lucky enuf to get into a lifeboat but as the titanic slid into the water, he dived from its prow into the icy waters. Coming upon an overturned lifeboat he hung on untill the carpathia came to his rescue at dawn, more than 1500 other people were not so lucky.
